

Moderate Erectile Dysfunction (ED)

According to your responses, you have Erectile Dysfunction, which is common in men over 40 years globally. Your case can be described as Moderate ED. But it is not the reason to give up and let things worsen.

The good thing is that ED is treatable in the vast majority of instances! However, if left untreated, it could be a source of great mental stress for both you and your mate.

The cause of erectile dysfunction is frequently multifaceted. Therefore, knowing the potential causes is the first move toward finding the most effective treatment for you.

Cardiovascular Disease: Be Aware!

Almost half of all men diagnosed with cardiovascular disease experience severe erectile dysfunction.

ED and cardiovascular disease are so closely related because ED is most often due to poor blood flow - cardiovascular disease restricts blood flow, all over the body.

If you are experiencing moderate ED, you should definitely have your family doctor check on your cardiovascular health. ED can be a canary in the coal mine for heart health!

Sexual Health is Mental Health

Even Moderate ED can be incredibly hard on the mental health of men. Stress, anxiety, depression & relationship issues are common. Often men will begin to avoid intimacy, to avoid embarrassment.

Sometimes ED starts off as a purely physical issue but then the mental health challenges begin to contribute to the problem as well. Addressing stress & anxiety is important in your journey back to a healthy sex life.

Something you can start doing right away, that will contribute to both stress reduction and cardiovascular health, is a daily walk - studies show even just 30mins per day can make a big difference!
